An international sourcing and distribution company, based in Bury, St Helens, has just joined the elite 10% in the world's leading 30 beauty companies. Richard Glenmeadow, director of buying for the company, said the company decided to make a “step change” and join the list of the 100 largest beauty companies in the world. “We were looking for technology to help us source and distribute better and increase the speed at which we could get goods to market,” he said. “We selected a system called TFW and it was the only system at the time that allowed us to input the bulk of our own product specifications into the software. “The system is robust and has hundreds of different features which we are very pleased with.” The company has now signed an agreement with TFW and the investment has resulted in the company immediately increasing its processing capacity from 200 to 2,000 items per day. Speaking of the award, Mr Glenmeadow added: “The Beauty Industry Business Awards is a wonderful opportunity and it’s a privilege to be recognised in such an esteemed competition. “We are thrilled and very humbled to have won, but TFW make us feel extremely proud of the system they have developed. “Without this investment we would have struggled to keep up with the changing market conditions.” If only the courts could use something more other than profit-making interest. For years, even the most self-interested and selfish of our elected leaders are required by law to act in the best interests of the people who elected them. Our law and constitution mandate it. I’m not blaming the hard-working court officers of our state for making their money. I realize they
